

Wallace A. Sprague

3 December

Dear Mr. Correa:

Enclosed is my contribution on counter-intelligence for the Services chapter written by [redacted] STAT Saxe has seen it, but no one else. A number of his comments have been deferred to in preparing the present second draft.

You will find it rather imprecise, and with too vague conclusions. I think that you should see it anyway at this stage because of your talks with the FBI, which is mentioned at some length. I think it may be necessary to change the whole treatment of the subject, perhaps making a new chapter devoted to counter-intelligence alone.

I expect to be available for work during most of next week, and have tentatively planned to go to Washington on Tuesday or Wednesday to consult with Bob. That being the case, I should be grateful if I could solicit your comments on Monday.

Yours very truly,

Wallace Sprague
